It has been more than a year the covid-19 pandemic striking all parts of the world along with a major impact on both the social and economic aspects globally. With the current circumstances, the ability of adaptation and agility is required for organizations in facing the uncertain world situation.

This seminar and masterclass event aims to discuss how an integrated GRC approach helps organizations to be able to increase their agility in responding to new challenges amid uncertain situations and how an integrated GRC approach can add value to organizational resilience and sustainability.

Participation in the entire series of seminar and master class, ideally, will have enabled participants to understand how to build agility with an integrated GRC approach, and how the integrated GRC approach can add value to organizational resilience and sustainability.
